REMOVE MALES FROM FLOCK

Infertile Eggs Are Best to Keep and Cost Less to Produce—Send the Roosters to Market.

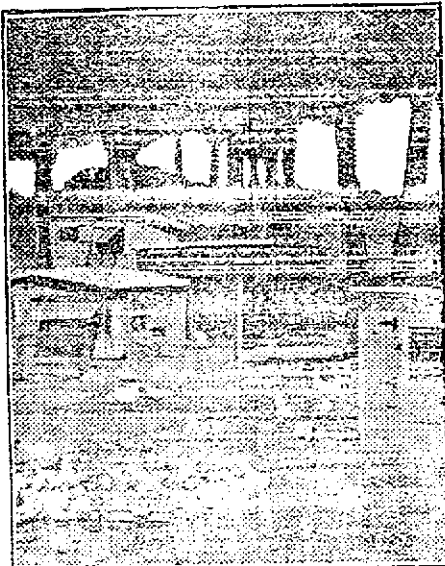

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Produce infertile eggs. They are worth more, as they keep better and they cost less to produce since there are no roosters to feed. No expense, education, ability, or labor other than catching and killing or selling the roosters are necessary. Remove the males at once.

While eggs are plentiful some should be preserved for the winter months, as they will be scarce and high priced. It costs but little in time, money and labor, and is so easily done that it is only common sense to do it. Use fresh, infertile eggs and let customers know that they can get such eggs for preserving. Those who have never preserved eggs should get in touch with the county or home demonstration agent, the state extension director, or the United States department of agriculture.

Now is the time to begin culling flocks. Send the roosters to the chopping block or the market. Eliminate all weaklings and deformed chicks, get rid of the chick that stands along the side of the coop with its wings down, its feathers ruffled, eye shut, and head down. Do not keep a single chick that you are not sure it will pay to raise.

Shade, clean fresh water, clean coops, and colony houses, and good ventilation and plenty of room during the night are of the greatest importance in growing healthy, strong, vigorous birds, whether they are for meat, eggs, or breeding.

Growing chicks should have plenty of good, nourishing food. Bone meal should be fed liberally to those intended for layers or breeders.

Do not forget to continue the fight on mites and lice. They must be fought all the time in all sections and in all seasons.

ALBERT

The national pipe smoke

Prince Albert's own cigarettes under your bonnet! It's so good, it's like a cigarette—and so easy to roll! And, you just take a little Prince Albert and you're away luck! You see, P. A. is crimp cut and it's the only cigarette that's put—and you don't lose a lot when you start to roll the pipe around the tobacco!

Roll the pipe around in a jummy pipe as much as you do in a home-rolled cigarette. The crimp cut and parch are cut out by our exclusive patented process. You know P. A. is the tobacco that has led three men to smoke pipes where one was smoked before. Yes sir, Prince Albert blazed the way. And, me-o-my, what a wad of smokesport will ripple your way every time you fill up!

To make the Maxwell light they used the quality steels

THE story of Maxwell is a story of metallurgy. This great science makes possible a 1960-lb., 109-inch wheel-base, 25 h.p. car, whose common denominator is Quality.

It has made possible a vehicle weighing but 1960 pounds itself to carry 750 to 1000 pounds of human weight a distance of 100,000 miles or more—to carry it at low cost and to carry its 5 passengers in comfort.

This is about 2. to 2 1/2 pounds of vehicle weight for a pound of "human freight."

When you stop to compare weight for weight with other cars, and size for size you will quickly realize that the Post-War Maxwell is a far thing rank on the subject of light weight.

But this light weight of the Post-War Maxwell is not a matter of "trimming the weight," but a matter of metallurgy.

The use of this science in building 300,000 previous Maxwells has developed lighter but stronger steels, and that is one reason why the Post-War Maxwell has caught the public fancy as few cars in recent years have done.

The demand is in excess of 140,000 for the current year. Only 10,000 can be built.

Therefore, an early visit to look over the Post-War Maxwell may save disappointing days later on.

This transaction is held by the Attorney General to be proof that they were withdrawn for purpose of sale and under the act of 1919 they cannot be stored again.

Results of experience in the bluminous mines will also be presented. SENATOR LODGE'S JOB

It is apparently no easier for Senator Lodge to reconcile his composite majority to his program of "reservations" than it was to bring them to unanimity with respect to amendments to the treaty. Following the defeat of the first lot of amendments Mr. Lodge solemnly assured the people that there could be no ratification of the treaty without "effective" reservations, and he permitted the impression that the adoption of these qualifications of America's acceptance was to be a matter of only a few days' time. Indeed Mr. Lodge gave figures to support his prediction—or threat.

The sequel shows that upon the question of "reservations" as upon the issue of amendments and every other vital proposition, the Republican majority in the Senate is simply an aggregation of factions. There are Republican Senators who are opposing "reservations" as vigorously as they opposed amendments; there are some who favor "strong" and others who prefer "weak" reservations; there is besides the coterie that wants to kill the treaty whether with the bludgeon of amendments or the club of "reservations"—it is not particular which.

All that Mr. Lodge has to do, therefore is to harmonize these divergent elements; to induce them to accept his plans and leadership. That also was the only task he had with regard to amendments—and the public has an acute recollection of what happened. Already there are signs that Senator Lodge, who began as a sponsor of amendments and subsequently became a champion of "reservations," will be forced to shift his ground again and find himself ultimately in the company of "mild reservations."

LOST OPPORTUNITIES

Republican leaders in Congress have failed as signally to make political capital for their party—and that was one of their purposes—as they have to enact beneficial legislation for the country. A good legislative record would have been at once useful to the people and advantageous to the Republican party. A catalogue of their opportunities happens also to be a list of their failures.

When the special session of Congress was convened last May the country expected and demanded a whole body of measures that would assist reconstruction. There was, for instance, the problem of fixing the definite status of the railroads, which were neither the property of the Government nor yet the absolute possession of their stockholders. For want of any decisive action of Congress the roads still remain in the same anomalous situation. Special taxes which went to swell the cost of living without at the same time representing large revenues to the Government were on the books—and they are still operative. Provision for the soldiers was generally desired and certainly was justified, but even on the first anniversary of the armistice they are still lacking, and the portion of them who are now in the process of being discharged are in a predicament which is a disgrace to a people who profess to be the most generous in the world.

As the members of the Republican House and Senate have been elected from the Republican party, as citizens, without regard to party and community, and especially as taxpayers, they would have welcomed and applauded a quick, efficient, restful solution of these problems, which touch so intimately the welfare of every class. But after five months of patient expectancy they are disappointed. It is inevitable that the recollection of these delinquencies will be carried to the polls next year by thousands of voters.

"INVESTIGATIONS" DISCOUNTED

Republican "investigations" into the conduct of the war have progressed far enough to admit of an assessment of their value either as correctives or deterrents. They have covered a good deal of ground and filled many thousands of pages with testimony and documentary materials. They have furnished texts for news and comment. They have served some partisan uses. The inquiries have been made largely by Republican majority to give what authority and moneys were needed by the inquisitors to journey here, there and yonder in quest of evidence.

What has been adduced in the way of facts to convict any single important official of the Government of dishonesty or dereliction? Any person of fair mind, whatever his political creed, will agree that even the record which these Republican committees have produced from the mouths of many witnesses fails to show worse than waste that was inherent in the rapid preparations for the biggest war of all times, or errors of judgment of less consequence in America's first few months of belligerency than those made by some of the Allies which had three years' experience in the conflict.

Much of the testimony which these committees have taken was that of persons with grievances concerns which failed to get contracts; military officers whose plans or suggestions had been vetoed; subordinates with grudges against superiors; men with partisan or personal animus. Of the statements that were true only a few were new; a great deal of what was new is under suspicion as to its accuracy.

Before the "investigators" began Secretary of War Baker and Democratic leaders in Congress frankly turning the industries of peace to the making of munitions on a vast scale, time was a more important element than money; that between losing days and losing dollars the War Department and the other branches of the Government did not hesitate to choose. It was Democratic officials that detected and ousted incompetents and proceeded—with the help of Republicans like former Justice, Charles E. Hughes—against delinquents.

It is notable that even Republican newspapers which have a sense of news values are devoting little of their space and none of their editorial columns to these "investigations." They are showing hardly any interest in last year's history even though Congressional partisans seem to think it has a bearing on next year's campaign.

There is no prospect that the status of the railroads will be determined by the present special session of Congress. The roads will have to run as other governmental and private enterprises are running—on the momentum they received from Democratic legislation.

The Republican majority in Congress is pretending to be following a policy of economy in appropriations. But who is making such liberal allowances of time to the Republican Senators who are wasting so much of it in talking to the galleries against the treaty?

Filibusters have been Republican weapons against many measures for the country's good, and it is by no means unfair to charge the present obstruction of the treaty to the same source and purpose. To call the Republican gabble a debate on the merits of the treaty would be a grotesque misnomer.

Soldiers are waiting more or less patiently to find what Congress is going to do to redeem Republican promises of compensatory legislation. Republican leaders reply that they are waiting to ascertain what the soldiers desire. But these same leaders didn't consult the soldiers last Spring before making their pledges of immediate action.

If the Republican majority in the House of Representatives will permit investigation of its several delinquencies requested by the member of the public who has a right to know, and if the taxpayers have unhesitatingly contributed to the expense of advertising campaign material for the G. O. P.

Probably He Did.

MOTHER OF THANKSGIVING DAY

How Sarah Josepha Hale Succeeded in Establishing the National Holiday at a Uniform Time

MRS. SARAH JOSEPHA HALE, "THE MOTHER OF THANKSGIVING"

A Thanksgiving to God for His House

And glow like it.
Lord, I confess, too, when I dine
The pulse is thine.
And all the other bits that be
There placed by thee;
The words, the purlain and the mess
Of watercross,
Which of thy kindness thou hast sent;
And my content
Makes these, and my beloved beet,
To be more sweet.
'Tis thou that crown'st my glittering hearth
With guileless mirth,
And giv'st me wassail bowls to drink,
Spiced to the brink.
Lord, 'tis thy plenty-dropping hand
That soles my land,
And giv'st me, for my bushel sown,
Twice ten for one;
Thou mak'st my teeming hen to lay
Her egg each day;
Besides my faithful ewes to bear
Me twins each year;
The while the conduits of my mine
Run cream, for wine—
All these and better thou dost send
Me, to this end,
That I should render, for my part,
A thankful heart. —Robert Herrick.

LORD, thou hast given me a cell,
Wherein to dwell;
A little house, whose humble roof
Is weatherproof.
Under the spars of which I lie
Both soft and dry;
Where thou my chamber for to ward
Hast set a guard
Of harmless thoughts to watch and keep
Me while I sleep.
Low is my porch, as is my fate;
Each void of state;
And yet the threshold of my door
Is worn by the poor,
Who thither come and freely get
Good words or meat.
Like as my parlor, so my hall
And kitchen's small;
A little buttery and therein
A little bin,
Which keeps my little loaf of bread
Unchipt, unlead;
Some little sticks of thorn or briar
Make me a fire,
Close by whose living coal I sit.

THE MODERN FEAST PROVIDER

The modern day pilgrim, while retaining some of the principles of the first pilgrims, has enlarged his scope of activity. The spirit of freedom, equality and peace is being spread throughout the universe, and America, democracy, it is to be hoped, is to be followed in spirit by the peoples of other nations. And then when the universal day of Thanksgiving comes all the people will know and realize what it means to be an absolutely free nation. Our photo shows the pilgrim of today, emulating his forefathers who went forth as he did to secure his bird for the feast.

Giving Thanks Together

Catherine Cranmer

"T'S A shame not to share this good dinner with some one," said Lydia, who had loved to cook from the days when she baked mud pies in the sun until the nights when she made fudge in a chafing dish. It was partly because of her taste for cooking and partly because of her distaste for boarding-house life that she gladly availed herself of a suite in the first one-tenant apartment house erected in her city. Her living room with its tiny fireplace was flanked on one end by a bathroom and a bed closet, and on the other by a complete and compact kitchenette.

On Thanksgiving day Lydia flitted from room to room singing gay snatches of song. Her trim little figure was lost in the looseness of a long-sleeved white apron with which her former landlady had endowed her when she set out on this housekeeping venture. Her auburn hair was soft about her flushed face and her blue eyes were bright with enthusiasm as she concocted tempting dishes for her Thanksgiving dinner.

The plump chicken browning in the tiny oven was small, and the quivering mold of cranberry jelly just turned out was small, yet there was much more of each than Lydia alone could eat, healthy and hungry as she was. This thought came to her as she was arranging pieces of toast for asparagus and with the thought came a horrible longing to share her good dinner with some one else who was healthy and hungry. The girls who were her co-workers in the public library either had homes in the city or had gone to their homes outside the city for Thanksgiving holiday, and besides them she had made few acquaintances in the city, so she could think of no one to invite.

She reflected that there must be many lonely people in that city who would gladly share with her the dainty meal that was now almost ready to serve. Then she thought of the young man who lived alone in the suite across the hall from hers and of whom she had caught occasional glimpses through his open door as he bent spectated eyes low over a drawing board. She found herself wondering, as she had several times before, whether her studies neighbor was an artist. She thought he looked too businesslike and practical for that.

Lydia smiled and blushed as she recalled the episode the evening before when her spilled cranberries had dropped under the good-sized feet of the young man, who had come striding from his apartment while she was stooping in the narrow corridor to replace the scattered berries in the paper bag that had turned turtle when she inserted her latch key. There had been stammering apologies from

GET WISE

In banking, it isn't much good to draw on your imagination.

Many lazy men's religion is based on the belief that the Lord will provide.

If nothing succeeds like success where does prohibition come in?

It has just about gotten so in this town it doesn't pay to sit up with a sick friend unless he has medicine in his cellar.

It isn't all profit, even the baker doesn't lie in (floury) beds of ease.

Be sure you are well heeled before you attempt to stand on your dignity.

Don't tell all you know. Give people the privilege of guessing.

Some girls are very foolish. They judge a fellow as a brick then they throw themselves at him.

Old Jupiter Pluribus ought to be told that the country has gone dry.

Some people's aim in life is restricted to nothing more than shooting off his mouth about it.

Judging from the present prices, the hen which lays the golden egg is still on the job.

It is quite possible to live on tick but that won't make things go like clockwork.

Who used to say he could take a drink or let it alone?

When you fail to reach the top don't try to turn everything upside down.

An airplane passed over Fran the other day going somewhere. George Deaner says it's a wonder more people don't get killed than do.

Barney Pilater would be better satisfied about the matter if he knew just why sugar is short. He is certain there is less sugar being used in whisky than ever before.

Sile Barlow's hogs seem to have the blues since Alexander Mosely has gathered his patch of corn. Alexander has to gather his corn earlier than he should every year on account of Sole's Hogs.

Gape Johnston says he has lost lots of money in his time by not having things people wanted to buy. He lost three or four hundred dollars yesterday when he saw a fellow who wanted to buy a team of mules and he did not have any mules.

There was a fellow in Piney Creek yesterday trying to sell a nice looking dog. Philip Shipley was on the eve of buying it until the fellow pronounced him a good "all-round dog." Phil said that "all-round" covers too much ground and he was afraid he might suck eggs and get into the pantry.

Dee Beecham has not complained for some time of rats bothering at his house. It is believed that on account of the scarcity of food at his house they have abandoned the place.

Miss Petunia Belcher expects to have her new dress completed and ready for public inspection by next Sunday.

Bill Hellwanger, while taking in the magic lantern show at Pumpkintown Saturday night was robbed of sixty cents in change. The robbers somehow overlooked a dollar bill he had in the bottom of his shoe.

It is more perilous to be innocent bystander than it is to engage in what may be going on at the time. The scrapper licks his opponent or gets himself beaten up and that is all there is to it, and then he goes on about his business before the police comes. Should any shots be fired, however the bystander is sure to stop one or more of the bullets, and be instead of the scrapper is called for by the ambulance.

those from their own number responsible men who stand above politics, representing the whole people to outline a plan of road building for the entire county, in which all are interested, and of whom, those whose needs are the most pressing, are first served.

The rip that the Independent Voters put in the sails of the Bedford "Gang" at the last election demonstrates that the people do not intend to be fooled longer by their methods. They boasted before the election that the Registry Books showed an enrollment of 2200 majority for the Republican Party in the county and presuming that they could do any "old thing" with the voters at the Primary or in the general political manipulations, and as one of the Independents said "Smooth it all over at the General Election," they stood defiant in the face of the unanswerable charges made against official mismanagement. In the light of the vote cast for the candidates at the last election, the result was a repudiation of the "Bedford Ring." William Mock who has the highest majority on the ticket of 1257 is nearly a thousand behind the estimated party majority, and Harry C. Adams, with his 296 majority is nearly TWO THOUSAND below the estimated party majority. But think where Edgar Smith, his political pal, would have been had he been running on the ticket—worse by far, indeed, than the lot that fell to Thomas Eichelberger when he met the one-armed farmer at the polls. But this Eichelberger defeat has a tale of deceit surrounding the work of his party managers, which he no doubt fully comprehends at this time. He was beaten by Ebersole 561 votes or over 2700 votes behind their estimated party majority, though he had the support of the Bedford Democrat, Annex. This simply shows that the "Ring" left him to his fate, though he had rallied a solid vote for the ticket in his own and surrounding districts which elected James, for James didn't care any more for Eichelberger than he did for Bill Helwanger but he got Eichelberger and his friends to yell themselves hoarse to "Stick to the ticket," "Stick to the ticket" and Everett and vicinity polled such a nice vote for James that James says he has a great following there. One hundred ninety four straight "Stick-to-the-ticket" voters and seven in Bedford where Pennell, James, Brice, Jordon, Points, Pennell's son, Brice's father, Brice's brothers, and where the threat to "mark" the ones who didn't vote straight emanated. Who knifed Eichelberger? That's the question with Eichelberger and his friends. Was it James? Brice? Pennell? Jordon? Who did it? Some of the gang didn't vote straight. They ought to be "marked". Of course they are keeping explanations hot as to the "why" and "wherefore" of the vote but the votes don't show that the "Bedford Gang" stuck "Mark 'em" Without a doubt James was beaten the week before the election but with appeals made to the state organization to save its local chairman from defeat and the party from disgrace, every local worker was rallied to his aid and every road building scheme invoked to silence the people he had betrayed, all of whom know how they were fooled, but are declaring their hope of having a chance at him again so that the county districts outside of his home districts of Bedford Borough, Bedford Township and Colerain, which went against him by a united majority of 440, may meet them and go one better.

Washington Letters

WASHINGTON, November 26 — Announcement of the threatened breakdown of Attorney General Palmer of Pennsylvania caused apprehension in the capital, and there was a distinct feeling of relief when subsequent reports disclosed that he was suffering from a severe cold and not in immediate danger of collapse. He spent the week-end resting in accordance with his physician's orders, and returned to his desk this week to resume his multifarious duties.

As the "strong man" of President Wilson's cabinet, Attorney General Palmer has assumed burdens which would have broken down a man of less vigorous health and constitution. His reported illness and the orders from his doctor to "slow up or take the consequences" have served to emphasize his enormous capacity for work, and more emphatically the great load of his responsibilities.

He has not taken a vacation since war was declared. First as a member of the district draft board in Pennsylvania, then as alien property custodian, and more recently as attorney general, he has borne greater responsibility and worked harder than any other member of the official family.

Here are some of the things he has done in the last thirty months: As alien property custodian, he built up, from nothing, an organization which took over $300,000,000 worth of German-owned property in the United States; Americanized industries in this country, drove out German capital, and converted the proceeds of the sales of large industrial holdings seized from German citizens into Liberty Bonds. All property so seized and the proceeds from sales are now held by the government subject to the disposition of Congress.

As attorney general he reorganized the Bureau of Investigation and brought radicalism under control in the United States.

Took steps for the quick deportation of alien anarchists.

Forced a settlement of the coal strike by his unyielding insistence on the supremacy of law and organized government and the paramountcy of the public interest to any class interest.

Obtained from Congress additional legislation placing control of food and clothing prices in the hands of the government.

Requested new laws—a request that has been before the Republican Congress without action for six months—making it a crime to advocate sedition in the United States.

Built up a new organization in the Department of Justice to combat propping and hoarding of foodstuffs.

Spent away partisan charges by Senator Elihu Root, reflecting on official conduct as alien property custodian, showed the plotting and influence of German financial interests behind them and won the Senate's confidence and unanimous vote with the single exception of Elihu Root—for his confirmation.

Approved at President Wilson's direction the wartime news over food sales and distribution formerly controlled by Bedford House and the Food Administration.

Insisted upon the removal of the foodstuffs from the hands of the profiteers and the distribution of the same to the people.

BERGER IS DEBARRED FROM CONGRESS

Victor L. Berger, a socialist of Milwaukee, whose case has been under investigation by the House of Representatives for several months has been branded by that body as unloyal when the House voted 309 to 1 to exclude him from its membership.

So far as the attitude of members of the House are concerned, the only member came from Wisconsin. He said, he represented the loyal people from Wisconsin and that it "would not be any more unpatriotic and un-American to put the former Kaiser in the White House than to give Berger a vote in the House of Representatives."

Some men accused of being traitors are only trying to hold their own business against the other profiteers.
